

In the age of nuclear power, without global agreement, the United States has “redefined conventional warfare” to include the use of radioactive munitions and weaponry.

Since 1945 the U.S has willfully dropped radioactive materials with a 4.5 billion year half-life on human communities, globally. The United States has irradiated New Mexico, Hiroshima, Nagasaki, Nevada, Utah, most of the Midwest and East Coast, and has polluted the South Pacific, with fallout from fission bombs. It has irradiated California, Texas, Maryland and Puerto Rico with depleted uranium testing; and has dropped tons of radioactive material on Iraq, Bosnia, Kosovo, Afghanistan, Kuwait, and Saudi Arabia. England, Australia and Israel have now joined the United States in using thousands of tons of depleted uranium weaponry in Iraq, a country without similar capacity, in the form of bullets, bunker busters, missiles, and up to 5,000-ton bombs, again irradiating the downwind countries of the Middle East despite growing evidence of harm.

U.S. arrogance has led the Non-Proliferation Treaty to the brink of unraveling. Nuclear weapons nations, led by the U.S., are seeking to expand and modernize their arsenals and, in response, non-nuclear weapons nations are seeking their own nuclear weapons.

The question we must ask is, by what madness, fear or lack of organizing power has the global community of nations deferred to the United States to self-assume, without global agreement, the collection and control of nuclear weapons worldwide while consistently developing, selling and dropping radioactive material on the planet? Is this not like giving a serial killer authority over the disposition of guns? Has the nation we were once proud to call The United States of America become the planetary embodiment of a global Hitler rushing all humanity to a radioactive shower? Shall we, the people, helplessly board the train once again... this time to global annihilation? We are seemingly powerless to put an end to our corporate-ruled government's plan for global economic domination. Is it worth the cost of a nuclear mega death for us or any sector of the globe?

DEPLETED URANIUM is a by-product of the nuclear industry — a waste product and a disposal problem. The perfect capitalistic solution was to make lethal weapons with the radioactive waste. In many countries the top-down political system appears to be corrupted. Therefore it is imperative at this time that we awaken the consciousness of the individuals within our own communities. Purchase batches of these postcards (100/$20.00) available at www.ProgressiveConvergence.com Perhaps take an hour of your time and put on parked cars; resell at conventions; or gift these postcards to veteran and anti-war activist organizations for distribution around the nation. Send batches out to international groups... After all this is a global problem.

The United States has engaged the world in NUCLEAR WAR.

Since 1991, the U.S. has deployed bullets made from radioactive depleted uranium, exposing countless civilians plus U.S. soldiers to excessive radiation. The effects have been abnormally high rates of cancer and birth defects.

NUCLEAR ALERT!

FAIR USE NOTICE

Effects of US radioactive depleted uranium ammunition warfare:

- More than 518,000 Gulf-era veterans are on medical disability (Only 7,039 were wounded in battle)
- 67% of post-war Missouri Gulf War Vet's babies were born with severe defects
- April 2003: World Health Organization announced global cancer will increase 50% by 2020
- During atmospheric testing the north Atlantic and Pacific fishing catch declined 50% and 65%
- Half life of depleted uranium: 4.5 billion years

Is this the vision we hold for the future of the world?

Nuclear war does not always come in a mushroom cloud.
